Speaker

Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen, it’s time for the joint press takeout. There will be two statements from Prime Minister of Pakistan and Prime Minister, His Excellency, David Cameron. And there will be no question and answer session. I will request the Prime Minister of Pakistan to make his statement, thank you.

Nawaz Sharif

I am pleased to welcome Prime Minister David Cameron and his delegation to Pakistan. He’s the first head of government to visit Pakistan, since historic democratic transition took place in this country. The people of Pakistan, on 11th May national elections, have shown, yet again, their unflinching confidence in democracy and the democratic ideals.

The enduring relationship between our two countries is an asset to both of us. As the Prime Minister, I understand the importance of the UK and Pakistan working closely together on a range of issues, not only in the region, but also globally. I am confident that our governments can achieve great things in the years ahead.
