

The Web is not FOREVER

by Alessio Carone @littlemad

The wise man's words

A photograph of Tim Berners-Lee, a middle-aged man with thinning hair, wearing a dark suit, blue shirt, and patterned tie. He is seated in the foreground of a large, ornate lecture hall with red upholstered wooden pews. In the background, other people are seated, including a man in a red sweater looking at a book. The hall has high ceilings and large windows.

Various years ago I saw Tim Berners-Lee talking at an university about his vision on what it will be the future of the web. 3 highlights point of the conversation sticked with me:

All the information we can possibly think of the world is on internet.

It is just a matter of know where to look,
know what to search, and how to ask around.

Information that are present in one particular page, might change, move or deleted few years after.

The real size of the web it is incalculable and is growing continuously.

The internet archive: Wayback Machine, is not enough a tool to store your information.

Copyright rules might make disappear the content that you have favourited in the past and was freely available like on Youtube.

OPEN DATA

The idea that certain data should be freely available to everyone to use and republish as they wish, without restrictions from copyright, patents or other mechanisms of control.

PERMANENT DATA

Maciej Ceglowski said: "I believe users have the right to retrieve their own data from any third-party service for the purposes of personal archiving. I believe that they have the right to view and interact with this data without restriction, as long as that view is private to them."

Make books with love

Pour avoir
de la chance,
il faut croire
en la chance.

You will have a physical object that it will work as your personal collection of ideas, content, layout and designs, that will stay with you even when your computer will run out of batteries.
